TO THE STARS AND STRIPES

(Frederick A. Wells in Zion's Herald)

Wave high, O banner of beauty! Float far, fairest emblem of right! punish;

Thy stars shall illumine his night.

Thy folds, by soft breezes fondled, Shall fetter the war lords of lust; And under thy shadow shall trust.

Thy staff, so stalwart and sturdy,

Thereon weary nations shall lean; Or better betimes be the scepter Held'out by Columbia, Queen.

To peoples of earth seeking safety, And sailing o'er seas to be free, Who, famishing, fall at her footstool, To find its fulfilment in thee.

Float far, fairest emblem of freedom! To the uttermost corners of earth: Till peoples and nations, uniting, Count blessed the day of thy birth.

Each one of them standing on tiptoe, Extending her fingers afar, And touching thy folds in her fond-
